528 kW Hydropower Plant Upper Austria

Austria is a highly renewable-focused energy system. Renewable sources overall (hydro, wind, solar, biomass) make up about 88 % of electricity production in Austria, showing how crucial hydropower is in combination with other renewables. Hydropower provides a very large share of Austria’s electricity, often over 60–65 % of total generation and at times estimated up to around 67 % The Alps, abundant rivers (like the Danube and its tributaries), and high rainfall make Austria especially suited for hydroelectric development — conditions that help it be a European leader in hydropower.
