Regulatory Premise

In recent years, Switzerland's financial regulatory landscape has been reshaped by stricter requirements introduced by FINMA, aimed at strengthening reporting standards and transparency. These changes significantly raised the compliance threshold for asset managers, leading to consolidation across the industry as many firms were unable to meet the new standards once the regulatory transition period closed at the end of 2022.

Throughout this period, the company maintained uninterrupted compliance and preserved its licensing status under the Financial Institutions Act. By successfully adapting to evolving requirements, the firm demonstrated its commitment to regulatory integrity and operational transparency, reinforcing its position among the select group of Swiss asset managers that remain fully authorised and active in today's market.
